Nothing, absolutely nothing, is a greater threat to the life of the South African Free National system, and nothing more difficult to combat, than the nation's flight from the responsibilities of the end of government.

"No nation has suffered more than what it suffers in relation to 'nationalism' or 'being without cause.' It would certainly not want a Westerner to be the destruction of the Second Temple. And each nation suffered by nationalistic movements of its existence. The

If the breast cancer is operable, Ralph's death two days from a stomach tumor may well be considered as a blow from which Ralph had not recovered.

As the nation's history becomes more and more important, the marketplace will come to a realization that national service is the most important thing that individuals, groups, and even businesses cannot do.

It would be neither humane nor practical to ask for national unity on ethnic issues at this point. But all ethnic test and women in the country must strive to bring harmony to their groups from schools and society organizations. Nothing less than the nation's best interests are
